It isn't easy being Great

- It isn't easy to be a Great Advisor – if it was we would have more of them
- This business has very low barriers to entry so we have lots of wannabes
- Bad Advisors hurt the credibility of the business and worse – do damage to the financial lives of their clients
- A recent customer satisfaction survey conducted by one of the major dealers said:
 - 70% of their very high satisfaction scores came from 20% of their Advisors
 - 80% of their very dissatisfied scores came from 20% of their Advisors
- Question – how do you get into the right 20%?

Building more successful financial relationships

Significant life changing events

- 70% of Investors would change Advisors if they had a better alternative and most Investors use life changing events as the catalyst for making a change
- Some catalysts are:
 - Death of a loved one
 - Graduation
 - Inheritance
 - Divorce
 - Retirement
 - Sale of a business

Canadian business owners

- There are more than two million privately owned business in Canada - 70% are family owned
- 71% of family business owners plan to exit their businesses in the next 5 to 10 years
- An estimated trillion dollars in business assets is expected to change hands over the next decade, representing the largest turnover of economic control in generations
- Fewer than 30% of business owners have any transition plan

2011 is a big year for opportunity

- Very relevant year for our industry – 1st boomers turn 65 in 2011
- Boomers are one of the largest and most influential demographic groups in history
- And they are the group that has largely driven the growth of our industry
- Why are they so relevant beyond their size and influence?

Money in motion

- Dissatisfaction isn't enough – life events create “money in motion”
- Investor Economics research indicates that 61,000 HNW families will change providers this year and 300,000 mass affluent Investors will change Advisors as well
- This is a total of $200 billion dollars in search of better advice
- EVERY YEAR!!!!!!!

Defining your sweet spot client

- How many of you can define your sweet spot – your perfect client?
- How many of you can define your perfect client in terms of:
 - Their life stage – working/retired
 - Industry
 - Marital status
 - Education
 - Age
 - Where they live
 - Ideal investable assets
 - Minimum investable assets
 - Their key financial challenges
 - Their personality traits – need for high or low touch, detail orientation, communication needs, investment philosophy – active or passive/involved or uninvolved?
- Have you ever used the SWEET SPOT TEST? It's called "call display – 4:00pm Friday afternoon". Do you pick up the phone for that client? If not, they are not your sweet spot client

Position yourself as an expert

- Once you understand your sweet spot you build your expertise around this group
- Just like doctors and surgeons, they have specific specialties and expertise – Advisors need to be experts too!
- You use your “sweet spot” client’s common traits as a tool to define your capabilities
- Most importantly – you use their most important financial life needs to define your expertise
- Are you an expert at transitioning clients into a financial life after divorce? Into retirement? Career transition? Intergenerational business transition?

Turn your expertise into content

- Why? Because:
 - Content provides validation and credibility
 - Content provides reach
 - Content is scalable
 - People believe what they read...and watch
- Some examples of "content" are:
 - Videos
 - Columns
 - Newsletters
 - Websites

Have the right client conversations

- According to Advisor Impact's research:

- Engaged clients = satisfied clients on steroids

They:

- Expect more contact
 - Receive more contact
 - Place a higher value on a broader range of services
- Great Advisors receive very high customer engagement scores
 - Great Advisors seldom miss an opportunity to learn more about their clients needs
 - Great Advisor use that information to understand what is most important to their clients which leads to much deeper relationships – AND, it uncovers new opportunities...
 - And finally...in customer satisfaction studies...engaged clients are more likely to comment on the following:
 - Their advisor helped them understand the impact market turbulence would have on their portfolio
 - They were better able to stay on track because of this understanding
 - They kept focused on the long term plan
 - AND, their Advisor added value well beyond portfolio performance – these Advisors are talking about the right things!!

Take action

- In my experience, you will have heard at least three great ideas today that are actionable
- The magic lies in your ability to take action on the three things that will make you more valuable to your clients....the right clients
